ADR- Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road

ADR courses are required for any driver who carries hazardous materials in any vehicles. We offer these courses at our centre in West Bromwich or on customer premises.

All drivers must pass module one – the Core Module, regardless of the type of vehicle they will drive or the chemicals they will carry. They must then pass either module two (tanks) or module three (packaged goods), or both if they wish. They can then choose from any combination of the classes, modules four to twelve, depending on the class of chemical they wish to carry.

The ADR training programme can now incorporate 21 Hours (Core/ Packages) or 28 Hours (Core/ Packages/ Tankers) worth of the Driver CPC training.

The ADR licence is valid for five years, after which it can be renewed by taking a refresher course; this can be taken at any time during the last twelve months of the current licence. A refresher course must be taken while the original licence still has at least six weeks to run, this will allow time for the papers to be processed.
